

Under the new immigration regulations, immigration officials are not required to transfer applications and do so only in those cases in which doing so would enhance Program integrity. As a rule, this is no longer practiced, and visa offices can refuse to transfer a case.